

IslandMe

Mission

To promote the biological, geological, and cultural conservation of islands via rendering the concept of islands as wellness services.

Vision

Islands are a precious, finite resource. Their geographic smallness belies their importance in human culture and the natural world. Ensuring that these incredible environments will flourish for people and fauna, necessitates that their cultural value be experienced despite their remoteness. If this microcosmos and its sporadically-forgotten value can be delivered both continually and over oceans, perhaps protection of these relatively delicate and rare cultural-natural resources is possible. Towards this end, we use digital media as a vessel to make the sounds, history, and biodiversity of islands utilizable in the pursuit of personal achievement and everyday life.

How

- Island-originating sound recordings utilizable in alarm clock, meditation, and study sessions.
- Goal setting and habit tracker set in the context of a trans-oceanic journey.
- Travel log and travel planner with integrated biogeographical and historical information in navigable map interface.

Principles

Transparency in media origin and clear attributions.

Conservation is important, extremely important.

Making historical and natural information utilizable in everyday life will change the world.

Not all human or natural histories have been equally well documented or explored but I will strive to deliver the diverse breadth of stories that have unfurled on islands through multiple points of view.
